

Julie Trapp, MBA '19
Divisional Secretary for Business
Wisconsin & Upper Michigan Division - The Salvation Army

“Working on a project with people I’d never met and having to accomplish something together online was enjoyable for me,” says Julie Trapp. “I love the cohort aspect of ONU Global’s degree programs.”

Julie earned both her Bachelor of Business Administration (BBA) and Master of Business Administration (MBA) degrees through ONU Global. Following a clear plan put in place by ONU Global and working together with her cohort helped ensure her higher education success. Today, she is the Divisional Secretary for Business for the Wisconsin and Upper Michigan Division with The Salvation Army.

“I never expected to have either of these degrees,” Julie says. “I was able to achieve this with my cohort, one class at a time. The two-year programs were very doable for me.” As an ONU Global student, she was a single mom of a teenager and working a full-time job.

Other students in Julie’s cohort were also working full-time jobs and had family responsibilities. They lived in various U.S. locations and were from different backgrounds. Many wanted to find a new direction for their careers. “Our cohort was together for two years,” she says. “We developed relationships. When anyone had struggles, our cohort was there for them. We helped one another succeed.”

Julie especially appreciates the fact that her ONU Global professors also wanted her to succeed. “If I had a struggle or problem understanding a concept, they met with me outside of our class meetings,” she says. “They explained until I understood.”

To anyone who is thinking about entering a ONU Global degree program, Julie says, “Go for it! ONU Global provides you with a clear plan to make this doable for you.”
